A MESSAGE FROM THE AUTHOR

---

Whether you're a shop-aholic who loves to shop 'til you drop or you're really just a scrooge who avoids the malls (virtual and otherwise), now's the time for all business savvy professionals to open their wallets and spread some cheer among their clients.

Now, some of you might be thinking: "What's the point in spending my hard-earned cash on my clients? Besides, it's not like a gift will make my clients change their minds about whether or not to continue using my services."

Hold on a minute. It's time to change your thinking and become more generous by giving gifts to your clients -- or at least your best clients.

You've heard the saying, "'Tis better to give than receive." However, I say, when you give, you're bound to receive something in return. No, you won't necessarily receive a gift in return. However, an end-of-the-year client gift serves as just another step in ensuring a continued business relationship, and even generating new business.

How can a simple gift have the power to do all that? Holiday gift-giving, for example, offers an excellent excuse to keep your name on your clients' minds and work your way into their conversations with others. So don't miss out on this valuable opportunity to keep in touch with your clients. In addition, end-of-year gifts generate lots of good will, while also creating reasons for your clients to think and talk about you in a very positive way.

For example, your gift will no doubt lead to such conversation starters as: "Hey, Joe, where'd you get these delicious cookies and beautiful gift basket from?" or "Wow, Susan, that's a beautiful painting, who gave you that?" And, when your clients answer, "The professional I have helping me gave that to me," your name has just entered a conversation that you're not even participating in. Now that certainly increases the value of the gift you sent!

Even more importantly, you've been the one to benefit from your loyal clients who have used your services, and even sent you more business via referrals, throughout the year. What better, more appropriate way for you to show your sincere appreciation and send the message to your clients that says, "I've appreciated your business all year long, and I look forward to continuing our business relationship in the New Year," than with an end-of-the-year gift?

No doubt there are more than 101 gift ideas today! Knowing that your clients will receive lots of other gifts this year, I've done my best to balance creativity with practicality, to help ensure that your gift will stand out from the others and will also be appreciated. I have also tried to keep most of the gifts under $100, as to respect certain industries' rules and compliance restrictions pertaining to client gift-giving. Again, use your discretion.

So let's get started, as I provide you with some ideas that can help you choose the perfect gift that will say, "Thank You" in a unique way. Just remember to include a handwritten thank-you note with each gift, for that personal touch.

Many of these gifts are available online and I have included links. When ordering gifts online, be sure to include a personalized thank-you card addressed to your client.
